

Introduction

The Need for Network Focusing on Youth

It is now becoming an urgent need to apply an agreed upon logical prescription for scientific advancement:

“ It is only through respecting renowned scientists and fostering young ones that science can continue to contribute to improving human livelihood ”

The establishment of German-Arab Forum represents:

...the beginning of a long lasting collegueship that is built on mutual benefit and a common goal to achieve; the betterment of Research and Development in the Arab Region which is an indispensable tool for the entire developmental process.

The “German-Arab Young Scientists Forum” is organized as an international information and cooperation initiative of the Junge Akademie and the Young Academy of the Arab World. We invite to this meeting young scientists from different Arabic countries and Arab scholars of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation. The selection of the participants includes different academic areas, like natural and social science as well as the humanities, which should give the event an interdisciplinary character.

On the German side members of the Junge Akademie and selected members of other Berlin research institutions will participate.

The Forum shall be an academic platform for exchange, where next to general information and discussion about relevant questions and problems of academia in Germany and the Arabic world perspectives for joint research projects shall be discussed. In addition it is planed to visit with our Arabic partners some of the academic research institutions in the Berlin area. Thus the aim of the forum is to internationalise the academic research in a lasting way.
